

The Low-Risk Career Pivot Framework

Start with a smaller and more practical process.

Identify your transferable skills

Look beyond your job title and write down the abilities you have developed

Choose one small project to test

Pick something that allows you to experience the work rather than only think about it

Speak with a few people already doing the work

Ask thoughtful questions, focus on reality, not inspiration alone.

Notice what creates energy

Pay attention to how you feel during the work

Decide the next small step

Gain enough evidence to decide what the next step looks like
